The Wisconsin Association of Mediators (WAM) has created the designation of Practitioner Mediator as an indication of a member meeting a minimum standard of training and experience. Members attest to completing at least 40 hours of mediation training and mediating at least 20 cases or engaging in at least 80 hours of mediation. Members seeking this designation must maintain malpractice liability coverage for all venues in which they practice. They also agree to abide by the Association's Ethical Guidelines for the Practice of Mediation. Practitioner Mediators must complete at least 15 hours of continuing education every three years to maintain this designation.

The Association does not evaluate the training nor monitor the competency of mediators in any way. The Association is not responsible for the accuracy of the information provided. The Association recommends that persons interested in hiring a mediator follow our "Guide to Selecting a Mediator" to help them make an informed selection.
